Extension Forester Position
Southwest Region, Douglas County, Roseburg, Oregon

The College of Forestry (COF) and Oregon Extension Service (OES) at Oregon State University are seeking an Extension Forester in the Forestry & Natural Resources (FNR) Program. This is a full time, 1.00 FTE, 12-month, fixed term, non-tenure track position appointed at the rank of Assistant Professor of Practice.

FNR Extension Foresters generally serve a multi-county area, and provide educational program development, delivery, and evaluation for varying audiences such as forest owners, professional natural resource managers, policymakers, collaborative conservation groups, and others, involving a wide variety of forestry and natural resource issues. A sampling of key issues in this region includes wildfire, forest management and silviculture, timber management, reforestation, forest practices, invasive species, water quality and quantity, collaborative natural resource management, forest restoration, and biomass and bioenergy. This position is located in Roseburg and serves Douglas County in the Southwest Region.

Minimum requirements include a Masters degree in forestry or a closely related field; demonstrated ability to teach effectively in non-formal settings; demonstrated written and oral communication skills, including effective use of electronic and printed media; demonstrated ability to work independently with minimal supervision and to manage competing time demands; demonstrated ability to lead a team and be a team member; demonstrated ability to incorporate multicultural perspectives in programs; demonstrated ability to lead groups; and demonstrated ability use common computer software including proficiency with information technology. Position is 80% Extension program planning, development, delivery, and evaluation; 10% scholarship, including preparing publications, conducting applied research, etc., 5% program development and management; and 5% internal and professional service. Salary is commensurate with education and experience.
